CALIFORNIA CITY YOUTH COUNCILS

August 3, 2015 Merced City Council

WHO ARE THEY?

- 1. Berkeley
- 2. Brentwood
- 3. Burbank
- 4. Burlingame
- 5. Ceres
- 6. Chula Vista
- 7. Danville
- 8. Dublin
- 9. Folsom
- 10. Foster City
- 11. Fremont
- 12. Gilroy

- 13. Lafayette
- 14. Lathrop
- 15. Monrovia
- 16. Palm Desert
- 17. Salinas
- 18. San Carlos
- 19. San Mateo
- 20. Tracy
- 21. Turlock
- 22. Union City
- 23. Vista
- 24. Walnut
- 25. West Covina
- 26. Yuba City

- Master list of 87 California city councils provided by Institute for Local Government
- 26 youth councils responded to telephone and email surveys [30%]
- Sizes of youth councils range from 5 to 63.
- The selection process and formal roles varied.

Why Do We Need a Youth Council?

- To represent the voice of youth in city decisions
- To promote youth civic engagement

What Are Other Youth Councils Doing?

- Hosting social events (32%)
- Volunteering and community service (31%)
- Raising money for events and scholarships (28%)
- Organizing youth leadership summits and forums to identify youth needs and priorities (27%)

YOUTH COUNCILS AND CITY OFFICIALS INTERACTION

- Report on projects
- Presentations about community service
- Attend community events
- Some of the Youth Council and City Council have liaisons who attend each others meetings.
- Some of the Youth Council and City Council members sit on planning committees together.

Noteworthy Accomplishments

- Burlingame, Palm Desert, and City of Walnut have made anti-bullying campaigns.
- Corona had youth community service to help victims of domestic violence.
- Folsom built a teen center.
- San Carlos aided with banning plastic bags. They also held a forum called "Schooling the Schools" to discuss achievement gaps.
- San Mateo wrote a comprehensive transgender and gender non-conforming policy for the school districts.

How to Be a Better Representative for Youth

- We suggest that the youth council members take advantage of local volunteer opportunities to perhaps foster service-based learning and community engagement.
- Also the YC could organize their own teen summits and discussion forums to outreach and engage with other youth in the city.

Training

- 77% of the Youth councils in our study received some formal training
 - Training is mostly by a city staff or liaison or through direct experience.
 - The Brown Act and bylaws of the City Council.

How Youth Councils Increased Participation and Interest

- Community Outreach
 - Reached out to middle schools, sporting events and educational events
 - Gave surveys at schools and talk about issues in groups
 - Post flyers and posters in schools
- Incentives
 - Fundraise for scholarships
 - Free food
 - Field trips
 - Conferences
 - Events and Entertainment

How did they create more cohesion among the youth council members

- Youth have formal supervision
- Create group activities (ice breakers)
- External efforts of friendship

- 75% City Youth Councils that responded say they had problems with group cohesion.
- The main issues dealt with:
 - Punctuality and Attendance
 - Getting to know one another
 - Lack of commitment and disinterest of students
 - Lack of leadership

Challenges for Youth Councils

- 1. Not focusing on serious issues
- 2. Lack of community partnerships
- 3. Lack of decision making authority
- 4.Lack of group cohesion
- 5. Difficulty mobilizing youth and participation
- 6. Lack of youth representation
- 7. Limited staff and training
- 8. Lack of funding

Key Lessons

 There are discrepancies between what Youth Councils do and what Youth Councils are meant to do [Mission].

Youth Councils should have more support to serve as a better voice for the youth.

Recommendations for Youth Council

- Support youth council to serve as a better voice for youth
- Youth council can get involved with issues such as environmental sustainability, health, and safety.
- Provide incentives for youth council members as well as city youth to increase participation.
- •Reinforce team building for youth council, the need for commitment to full participation, and leadership

Acknowledgments

Special thanks to:

- Mike Conway, Merced City Council
- Lindsey Johnson, City of Merced
- Michelle Xiong, Building Healthy Communities
- UCM Undergraduate Research Team:
 - Robin DeLugan, Professor of Anthropology
 - Stergios Roussos, Interim Director of the Blum Center
 - John Dovales Flores, Undergraduate Researcher
 - Crystal King, Undergraduate Researcher
 - Mila Lopez Obeso, Undergraduate Researcher
 - Maria Ayala Rodriguez, Undergraduate Researcher
 - Ganci Sun, Undergraduate Researcher
 - Alan Valdivia, Undergraduate Researcher
 - Brenda Rojas, Undergraduate Researcher

Thank you for your time and attention.

For more information contact:

mercedyouthfund@gmail.com